BARUTI / ΜΠΑΡΟΥΤΙ

is Greek for “gunpowder“,
also a word used to describe something that has bite or edge.

Each fragrance has its own rebellious personality which melds with the personality of the wearer.

Baruti perfumes strive to push the boundaries of conventional perfumery as well as look for ways to tell novel and interesting stories.

About the brand

“BARUTI perfumes is an independent perfume brand from Amsterdam that is making a splash among fragrance lovers with its unique aromatic combinations. Founded by a self-taught perfumer Spyros Drosopoulos, the brand has become renowned for its strong personal character and combining novelty with wearability.

Heavily inspired by visual arts, rare raw materials and travel, each BARUTI fragrance is a persona with its own distinctive character which challenges the gender norms in perfumery. A small but steadily growing brand, BARUTI develops all of its formulas in-house. Formulas are written by the founder himself and are blended by hand at BARUTI’s laboratory in Amsterdam.

Indigo

Radiating blue summer skies, continuous music,
and effervescent big-city life.

it is a midday in late summer, the sun penetrates from the windows in a studio of a large metropolis. The climate is warm but the air is almost cold. Concentrated calm, in a aware solitude, but detached from the hectic life of the city.

There is a silent minimal music in the background while the sun goes down and sets. Walking and opening the window an hot and dry air strikes your face, the desire to interact with the rebirth of the city and part of it is born. You realize it's Friday.....and suddenly the phone rings

Onder de Linde

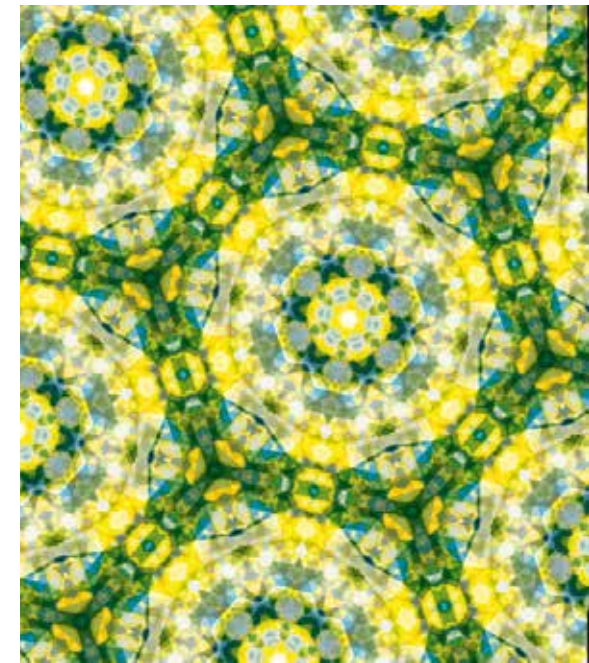

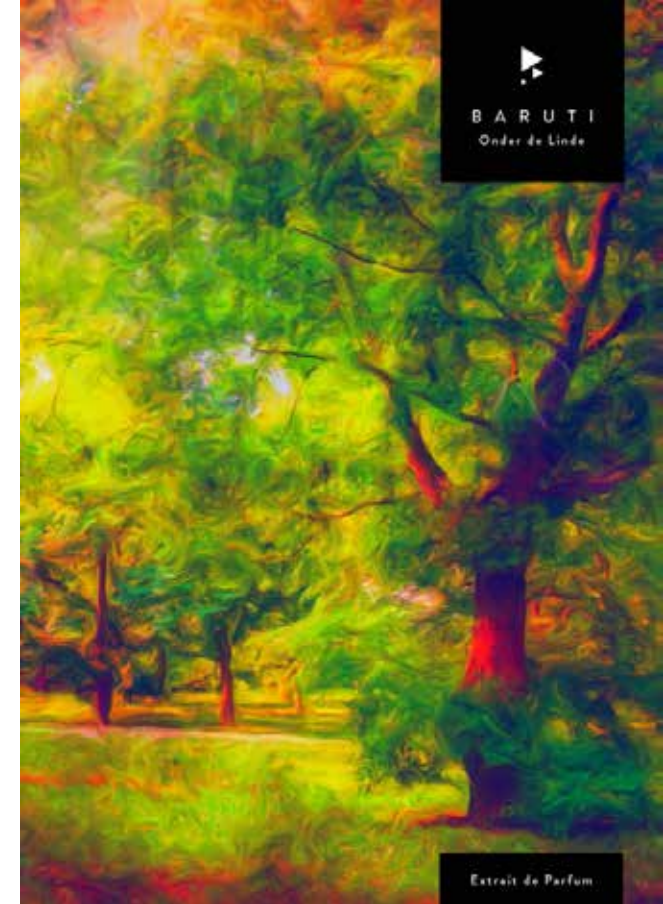

Encapsulates the promises of early summer.

Onder de Linde capsules of promises in the early summer. this fragrance is inspired by the iconic painting by Johannes Vermeer's "the milkmaid" with the desire to interpret a work of art in another form.

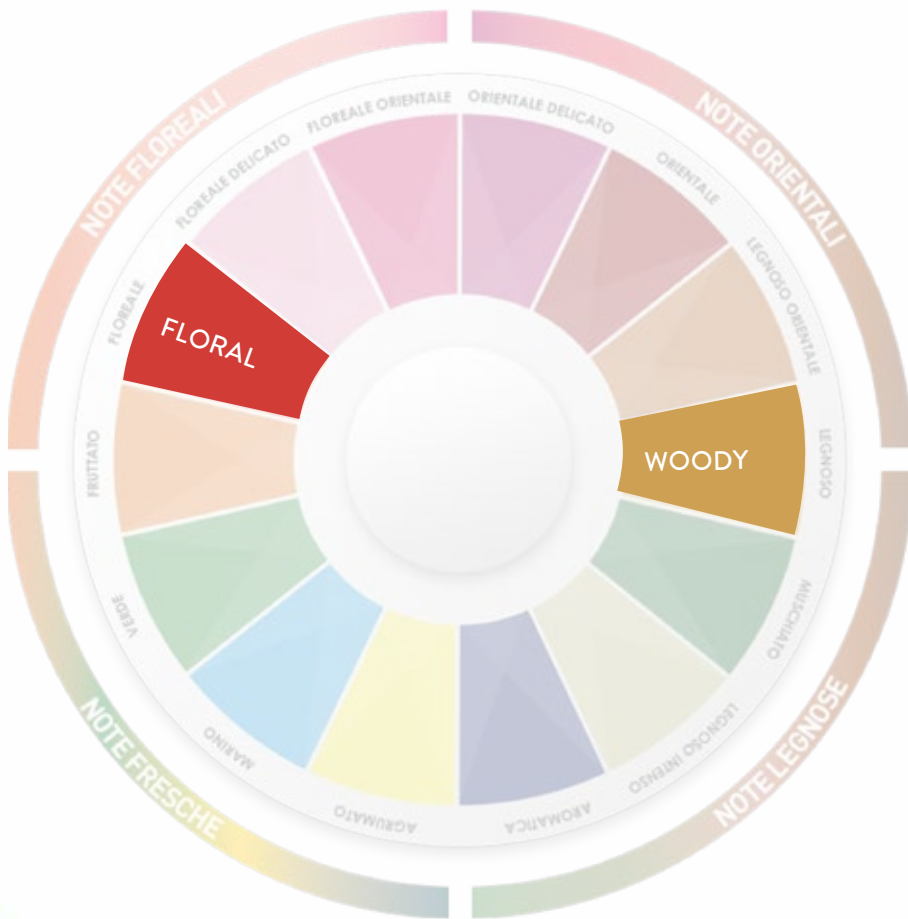

The first more literal interpretation of the objects is abandoned in order to dedicate oneself to that of the context: the young female universe and the time and the emotions that the work arouses in the author.

The result is a perfume in which the top notes of the alilla apple are washed down by the sweetness of vanilla and sandalwood and musk. A bright colored perfume full of joy. Initially the perfume was called Melkmeisje as the original name of the painting by Joannes Vermeer's. Notes: apple, lilac, linden honey, orris root, vanilla, vetiver, sandalwood, musk.

Voyance

Smoke, luminous and limpid, a mystifying paradox.

Voyance means clairvoyance in French. The name derives from its color: although the perfume is characterized by a white smoky flower, which should be dense and impenetrable, the fragrance is very clear and transparent as when looking into a crystal sphere. Born from the curiosity and experimentation of Spyros this fragrance combining different notes, the result is a scent with a definite note of moss that seems to have overturned the olfactory pyramid.

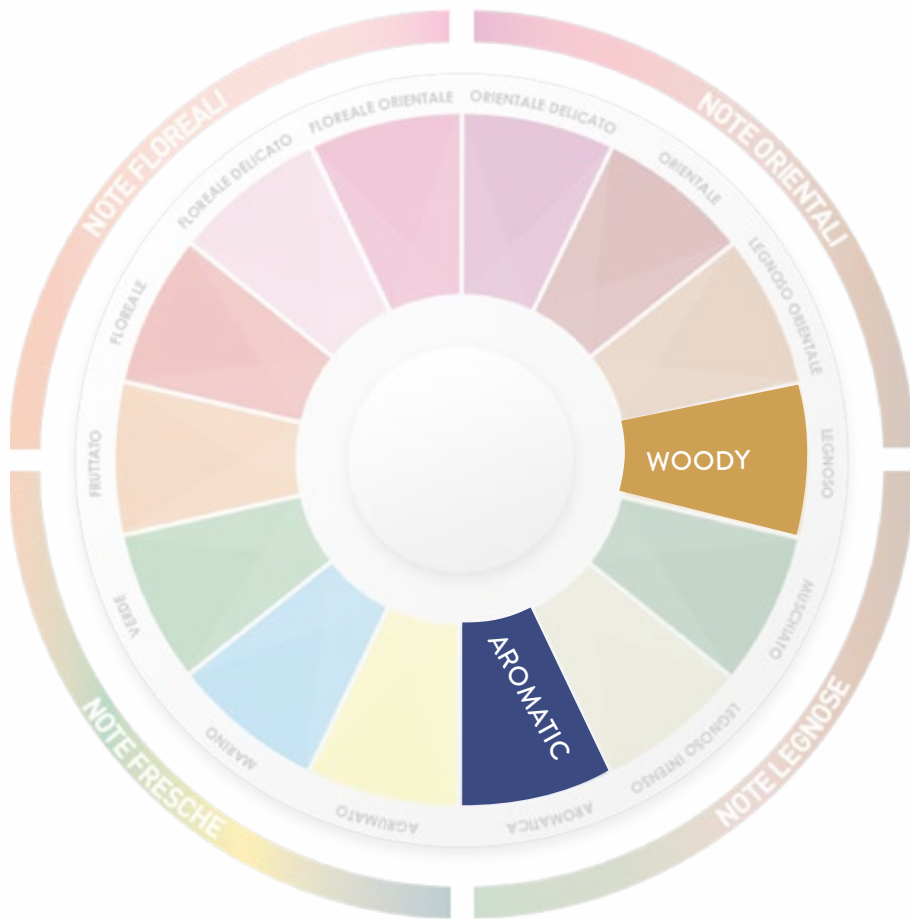

Unique in with a smoky side and a strong floral component. As a walk in the mountains the first note that emerges is the moss and sandalwood that release this feeling of fresh, clean, and crystalline. Smelling the fragrance is like to be in a journey where we bend to pick white tuberose flowers.

WITH NOTES OF Fresh mountain air accord, Tuberose, Guaiac wood, Vetiver, Sandalwood and Musk

Tindrer

Tindrer in Danish means twinkle the perfume is a game of contrasts. He is happy but sad modern and nostalgic at the same time.

A game of contrasts, like a cold April morning, the dew bathes the lawn, but is soon dissolved by the heat of the day. During the day, moments of sunshine alternate with strong thunderstorms, and finally a clear sky of stars appears: summer has arrived.

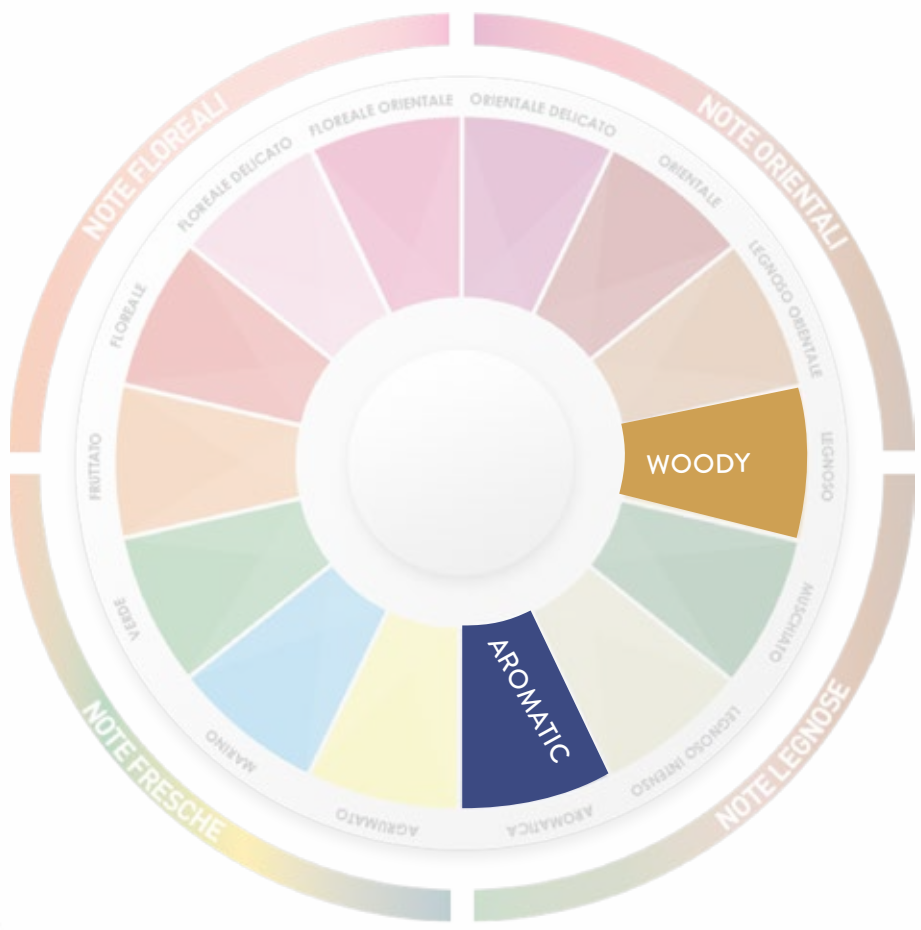

The scent expresses two contrast side friendly mixed together: one green and fresh, contradicted by the galbanum, the other warm and aromatic with notes of wet earth. the spicy purple flower is cold and warm and captures the contrast mentioned before. Finally the notes of moss and ambergris and oak moss give a comfortable and welcoming feeling.

Berlin in Winter

Long cold winter nights, intimate and cozy.

Berlin im Winter, what can be said about this city that has not been said before. Loved by some, loathed by others, one thing everybody agrees to is Berlin is an experience. And such is the perfume that pays tribute to the city!

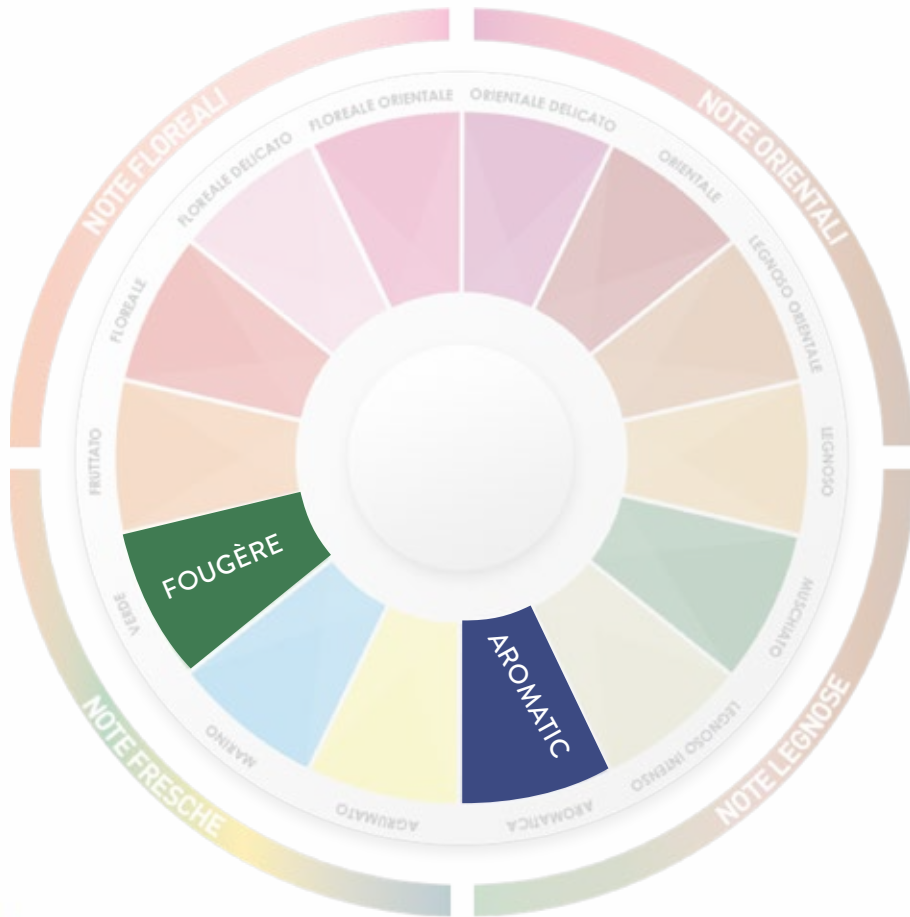

When I started working on the perfume I was opting to make something like a darker version of Indigo for personal use. Alas as the project developed, the perfume became truly one of its own right.

Retro in a unmistakably modern way, it is the rebel who answers to no one, a unique beautiful soul that's full of surprises, uncompromising but with a gentle heart. If one should need to put a label on it, it would sit somewhere between an old-school fougère, a gourmand and a heavy oriental.

WITH NOTES OF Cassis, Lavender, Mastic oil (Chios), Rose, Iris, Plum, Myrrh, Frankincense, Coffee, Whisky, NOOUD, Amber, Tonka bean, Leather

Tipo: Fougère Aromatic

Chai

Delicious Indian masala chai.

“When I created Chai I wanted to play with spicy notes, so I thought: why not take inspiration from a nice cup of hot milk and make my favorite drink a perfume?” Et Voila ‘: a modern gourmand, not too sweet, definitely spicy but with a soft and creamy texture. I put some moss and a pinch of pepper in the bases notes, so that Chai can persist for the whole length of the day and the depth of the night. ”

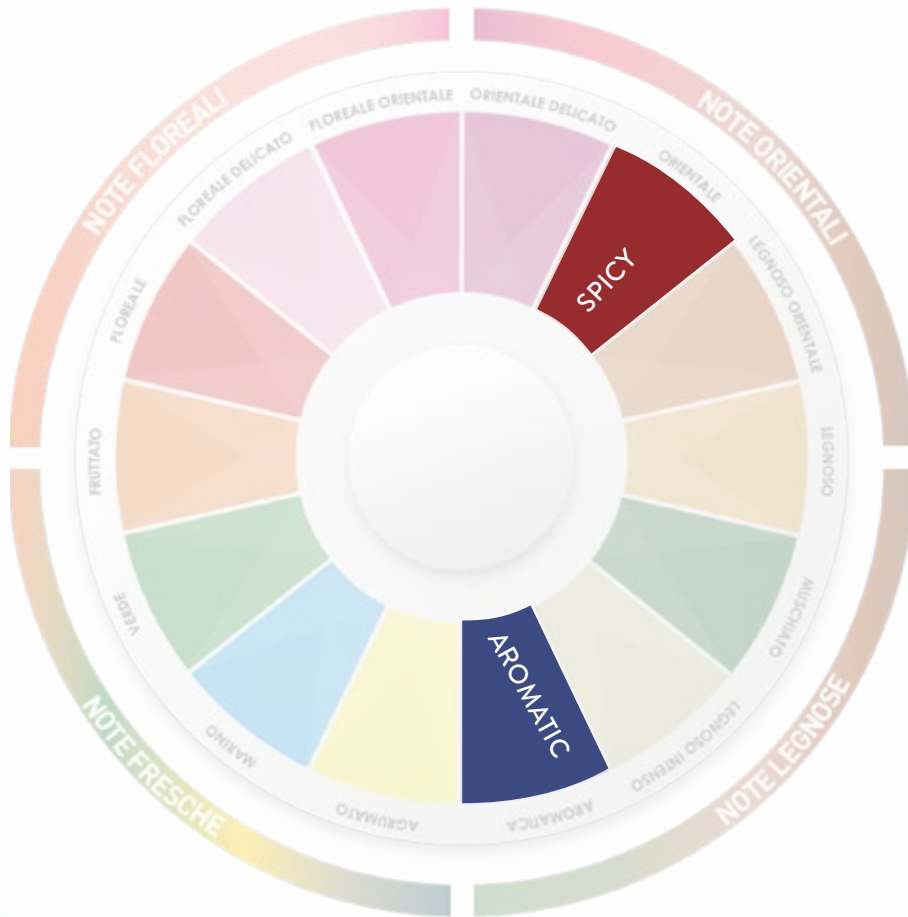

Much more than a beverage from which it is inspired, a gourmand not too sweet, the spicy notes of cinnamon, ginger and cardamom blend beautifully with the crekose and delicious notes of milk, cocoa and vanilla that gently sip on the velvety smoothness of musk rose

WITH NOTES OF Cinnamon, Cloves, Ginger, Cardamom, Pepper, Black Tea, Steamed Milk, Cocoa, Roses, Vanilla, Musk, Leather

Tipo: Aromatic Spicy Oriental - Gourmand

Dama Koupa

The Queen of Hearts, a perfume about elegance and passion.

“With Dama Koupa I wanted to make something that would be totally sensual and seductive yet retain it’s class and far from vulgar or too much in your face, screaming for attention kind of perfume. The perfume actually started out as a Indigo variation. First, I concentrated on the roses in indigo pushing them to the max and adding powdery notes to the composition but the results smelled all too familiar to my taste and even though they could have worked for other projects I didn’t find them interesting enough to be Baruti’s. So I started deviating from the original indigo formula more and more dismissing the roses and hyacinth completely and incorporating my iris accord and some new materials I had discovered along the way.”

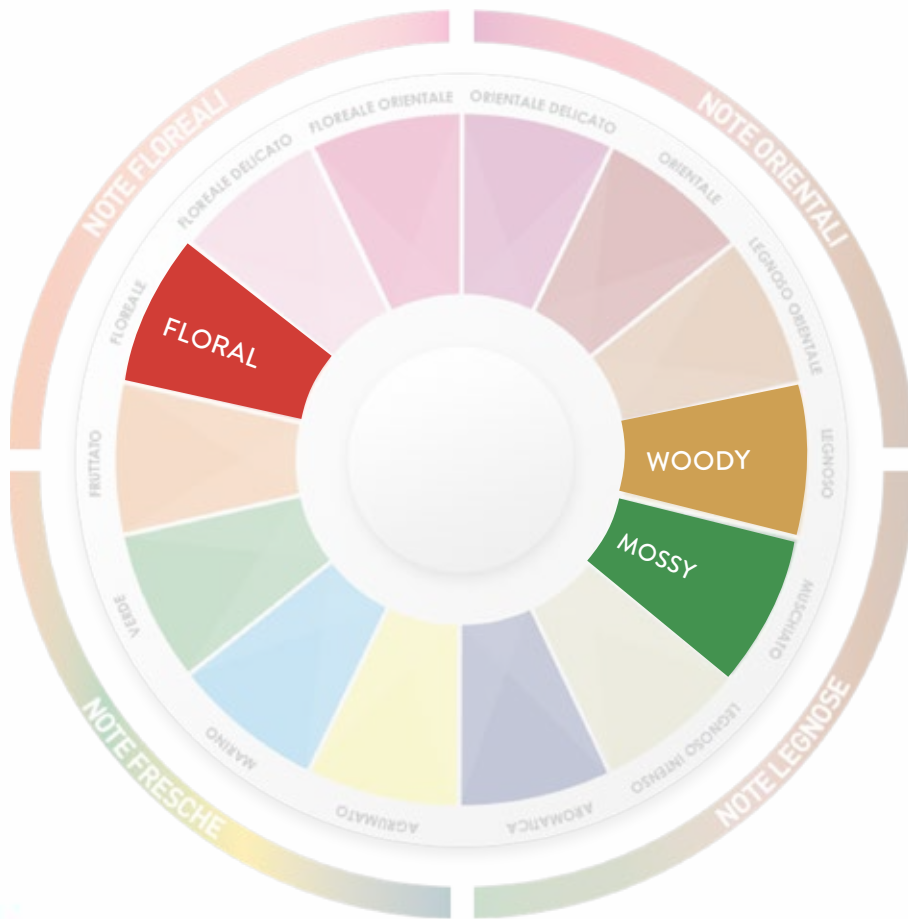

Early in 2016 the perfume started taking shape after 100s of “failed” trials when I decided to try the combination bitter almond with iris which to me is a great one. It drew the attention of my girlfriend who adored it and claimed it her signature even before it was finalized. From then on all versions were tested on her which is quite unusual as normally the perfumes are only tested on me but it fitted my original aim, and so at the end I concluded: mission accomplished”

WITH NOTES OF Bitter almonds, Grappa, Tonka bean, Vanilla, Cocoa, Iris, Osmanthus, Musk, Amber, White woods, Beeswax, Fir Balsam Absolute

Tipo: Floral Woody Mossy

NOOD

Opulent and sexy.
Smells of oud but doesn't contain a single drop and that's the naked truth.

It comes as close as it gets to real oud oil without using any of the actual material. If you never smelled oud (oudh/agar wood) but you like dark, woody, smoky, resinous, earthy perfumes with overwhelming power and sexual energy, you might want to give it a try!
